World War 2 was a global conflict that lasted from 1939 to 1945. It involved the majority of the world's nations, including all of the great powers, organized into two opposing military alliances: the Allies and the Axis. The war had its roots in the rise of fascist regimes in Europe, especially Nazi Germany, and in the aggressive foreign policies of these regimes.

The spark that ignited the war was the German invasion of Poland in September 1939. This led to declarations of war from Britain and France and the beginning of the largest and deadliest conflict in human history. The war soon spread beyond Europe, with Japan's surprise attack on the American naval base at Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, on December 7, 1941. This led to the United States joining the Allies in the war against Japan and Germany.

One of the most significant events of World War 2 was the Holocaust, the systematic extermination of six million Jews by Nazi Germany. The horrors of the Holocaust, along with the other atrocities committed during the war, forever changed the way people think about war and humanity. The world was shocked by the scale of the genocide and the cruelty with which it was carried out.

Another significant event was the dropping of atomic bombs on the Japanese cities of Hiroshima and Nagasaki in August 1945 by the United States. The bombs killed over 200,000 people and forced Japan to surrender, ending the war in Asia. The use of atomic weapons marked a new era in warfare and had a profound impact on international relations and the arms race between the great powers.

The end of the war in Europe came on May 8, 1945, with the unconditional surrender of Germany to the Allies. The war resulted in the loss of millions of lives and the displacement of millions of people. It also had far-reaching economic and political consequences, leading to the formation of the United Nations and the establishment of the United States and the Soviet Union as superpowers.
